

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

The Dotsons Encourage Others to Hear That Still Small Voice On New Recording

SILVER LAKE, Ind. – Husband and wife duo The Dotsons are excited to announce the release of their brand new recording – Still Small Voice.

Still Small Voice features production work from Eddie Crook (tracks) and Adrian Payne (vocals). Players such as Crook and Payne as well as Robb Tripp, Marty Shrabel, Kelly Back, Milton Smith, and more all put their expertise on this new album.

Tracks and vocals were recorded at Family Room and Starpoint Studio, both located in Gallatin, Tennessee. Still Small Voice was recorded and mixed by Adrian Payne (George Jones, Allison Krauss, Charlie Daniels) for A2Z Productions in Nashville, Tennessee.

Seven of the project's 12 tracks were written by John Dotson, including the title cut "Still Small Voice." The duo also put their touch on classics like "Rise Again," "Soul Fillin' Station," "God Delivers Again," "He Broke the Chains," and "Here Today, Gone Tomorrow."

John Dotson said, "We pray that through His sweet Holy Spirit our listeners will be encouraged and blessed as they hear our songs, and those who don't know Him as their personal savior will hear that 'still small voice' calling them into His kingdom."

Still Small Voice is now available to purchase at live and concert events from The Dotsons as well as their website.

The first single from the new recording will be announced at a later date.

The Dotsons recently reached a publicity and web publishing agreement with SSE Group, Inc.
